In the upper part, several large Japanese banners are visible, including one with the characters '反原発' (Anti-Nuclear) in black on a yellow background. Below these, a red banner reads '平和委員会' (Peace Committee). In the foreground, two large yellow hand-shaped signs are prominent, both with the text 'NO NUKES!' in red. One of these signs also has a green banner attached to it that says 'ストップ再稼働' (Stop Restarting). The crowd is dense, and many people are holding smaller signs and banners. The overall scene is one of a large-scale public demonstration against nuclear energy.

Energy Justice and Energy Law Iñigo del Guayo, Lee Godden, Donald D. Zillman, Milton Fernando Montoya, José Juan González, 2020-05-21 Energy justice has emerged over the last decade as a matter of vital concern in energy law which can be seen in the attention directed to energy poverty and the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals There are energy justice concerns in areas of law as diverse as human rights consumer protection international law and trade and in many forms of regional and national energy law and regulation This edited collection explores in detail at four kinds of energy justice The first distributive justice relates to the equitable distribution of the benefits and burdens of energy activities which is challenged by the existence of people suffering from energy poverty Secondly procedural or participation justice consists of the right of all communities to participate in decision making regarding energy projects and policies that affect them This dimension of energy justice often includes procedural rights to information and access to courts Under the concept of reparation or restorative justice the book looks at even handed enforcement of energy statutes and regulations as well as access to remedies when legal rights are violated Finally the collection addresses social justice with the recognition that energy injustice cannot be separated from other social ills such as poverty and subordination based on race gender or indigeneity These issues feed into a wider conversation about how we achieve a just energy transition as the world confronts the urgent challenges of climate change     Renewable Energy and International Law Chitzi C. Ogbumgbada,2025-11-27 This book addresses the injustices associated with renewable energy development and use within the context of the energy transition Primarily informed by a communitarian approach to energy justice the book draws on the philosophical concept of African communitarianism as a guiding principle This concept emphasises harmonious or communal relationships among members of a political and social community making it easier to justify solutions to renewable energy injustices in contrast to an individualistic approach The book argues that international law can facilitate this approach to energy justice by adapting existing norms standards practices and institutions Adopting the unfair distribution of renewable energy benefits in the international community as a test case the book contributes to existing energy justice scholarship by highlighting the significant contribution of non Western philosophies in addressing renewable energy injustices It also repositions international law as a tool for operationalising this approach to energy justice The book will be of interest to researchers policymakers international governmental organisations and civil society

Global Energy Justice Lakshman D. Guruswamy,2016 Softbound New softbound print book     Global Criminology and Criminal Justice Nick Larsen,Russell Smandych,2007-12 Global Criminology and Criminal Justice brings together 22 articles that constitute some of the most important recent literature in the field     Energy Security, Equality and Justice Benjamin K. Sovacool,Roman V. Sidortsov,Benjamin R. Jones,2013-12-04 This book applies concepts from ethics justice and political philosophy to five sets of contemporary energy problems cutting across time economics politics geography and technology In doing so the authors derive two key energy justice principles from modern theories of distributive justice procedural justice and cosmopolitan justice The prohibitive principle states that energy systems must be designed and constructed in such a way that they do not unduly interfere with the ability of people to acquire those basic goods to which they are justly entitled

The affirmative principle states that if any of the basic goods to which people are justly entitled can only be secured by means of energy services then in that case there is also a derivative entitlement to the energy services In laying out and employing these principles the book details a long list of current energy injustices ranging from human rights abuses and energy related civil conflict to energy poverty and pervasive and growing negative externalities The book illustrates the significance of energy justice by combining the most up to date data on global energy security and climate change including case studies and examples from the electricity supply transport and heating and cooking sectors with appraisals based on centuries of thought about the meaning of justice in social decisions
