Corruption Is Destroying Africa Gabriel I.H. Williams, 2019-07-23 This book is intended to contribute to the ongoing discourse about Liberia or about Africa which has often left people perplexed According to a 2013 World Bank report Africa has 30 percent of the world's minerals and proven oil reserves equivalent to 10 percent of global stock How is it that Africa which has such enormous mineral and oil wealth is the poorest continent in the world A similar question would suffice for Liberia which became independent since 1847 has been a sovereign nation for over 170 years but is ranked as one of the poorest countries in the world This is irrespective of the fact that the country is endowed with abundant natural resources Accordingly I herewith submit that Africa or Liberia is not poor but poorly managed and that corruption is a major source of bad governance widespread poverty and instability on the continent There can be no question that corruption is like a cancer eating at the vitals of Africa my beloved country Liberia being one of the worst affected on the continent This is why this book is titled Corruption is Destroying Africa The Case of Liberia Because of corruption critical public services such as health and education have remained in a state of dysfunction
