Varga, 2025-12-02 This edited volume operationalizes the figure of the ghost and subsequent hauntings through Derrida s framing of hauntology in an effort to attend to the liminal spaces that exist between presence and absence throughout social studies contexts and beyond Traditionally social studies education and its tenets of economics civics geography government and history have been concerned with how bodies become re produced re located destroyed and remembered across vectors of time However as this work argues the maintenance of strict demarcations of time becomes problematic by closing opportunities for students to engage with the complex ways that material bodies shift within temporal encounters As such this book is primarily concerned with pursuing and positioning such haunted encounters as generative lines of inquiry that grant us e g educators students researchers the ability to think differently about history the present and the future In a distinct move toward a pastpresentfuture this volume challenges the boundaries of social studies teaching learning and research by interrupting majoritarian temporal material positionings that stymie how social and ecological justice is narrativized understood and perhaps most significantly attained in the future American Apocalyptic Juli L. Gittinger, 2024-07-18 In this book Juli Gittinger argues that America s fascination obsession with the apocalypse is a synthesis of religion popular culture and politics in a way that is particular to the US and consonant with mythological historical narratives of America As a result we can identify American apocalypticism as a sort of religion in itself that is closely tied to civil religion that has a worldview and rituals that create identifiable communities and connects American mythology to apocalyptic anxieties Gittinger discusses how various cultures and groups form as a result of this obsession and that these communities form their own rituals and responses in various forms of prepping or survivalist practices She lays out an argument for a broad eschatology prevalent in the US that extends beyond traditional religious designations to form an apocalyptic worldview that is built into our narrative as a country as well as furthered by popular culture and media s contribution to apocalyptic anxieties Subsequently Gittinger uses case studies of apocalyptic events current or speculative that reveal how our anxieties about the end of the world as we know it inform our culture as well as religious narratives that emerge from such crises
