

Transition Economies

Transition economies are involved in a process of moving from a centrally planned economy to a mixed or free market economy

Some key aspects of the transition process

Liberalization of markets to give prices a bigger role in allocating scarce resources between competing uses

Privatisation of government (state) assets – transferred to the private sector

Reduction in tariff and other trade barriers so that the economy becomes more open

Reduction in the scale and scope of government subsidies e.g. to loss making industries

Legal reforms e.g. to protect private property rights

Banking reform and interest rate liberalization
