Vanderdonckt, Michel C. Desmarais, 2009-06-19 Activity theory is a way of describing and characterizing the structure of human activity of all kinds First introduced by Russian psychologists Rubinshtein Leontiev and Vigotsky in the early part of the last century activity theory has more recently gained increasing attention among interaction designers and others in the human computer interaction and usability communities see for example Gay and H Brooke 2004 Interest was given a significant boost when Donald Norman suggested activity theory and activity centered design as antidotes to some of the putative ills of human centered design Norman 2005 Norman who has been credited with coining the phrase user centered design suggested that too much attention focused on human users may be harmful that to design better tools designers need to focus not so much on users as on the activities in which users are engaged and the tasks they seek to perform within those activities Although many researchers and practitioners claim to have used or been influenced by activity theory in their work see for example Nardi 1996 it is often difficult to trace precisely where or how the results have actually been shaped by activity theory In many cases even detailed case studies report results that seem only distantly related if at all to the use of activity theory Contributing to the lack of precise and traceable impact is that activity theory spite its name is not truly a formal and proper theory Video Editing Techniques Course Brian Smith, The Video Editing Techniques Course provides a

Software Tools and Techniques for Electronic Engineers Keith Jobes,1994 Pushing Frontiers - Imaging For Photon Science Jiaguo Zhang,Iain Sedgwick,Cornelia B. Wunderer,2024-12-24

Developments of cutting edge X ray imaging detectors are largely driven by experiments at the large photon science facilities i e the synchrotron radiation sources and free electron lasers FELs which enable a wealth of investigations in physics material science biology chemistry environmental sciences and beyond

The next generation radiation sources namely diffraction limited storage rings DLSR and high repetition rate FELs operated in the continuous wave CW mode not only offer brilliant opportunities for research but also pose new challenges and requirements for the X ray detectors required to exploit them fully

Examples include the high count rate capability required at the DLSRs the ultra high continuous frame rate and data throughput at the FELs and a broad photon energy range from tens of eV to hundreds of keV spanned by the facilities

In order to meet the new requirements posed by the most advanced photon science facilities envisioned or already under development around the world today various novel photon detection and imaging concepts are being investigated and detector technologies are advancing fast

The goal of this research topic is to address the challenges and discuss the critical problems encountered in imaging systems for photon science including but not limited to sensing materials ASICs readout electronics detector systems and data reduction

Moreover it will encompass a discussion of the development strategies technological advances and recent achievements of each subject thereby facilitating the realization of complete concepts for novel imaging systems as well as further developments of individual detector technologies
