Abstract The aim of this study was to investigate the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of young adults. The study was conducted in a university setting. The participants were 20 young adults (10 males and 10 females) who were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The experimental group participated in a 12-week training program that included aerobic exercise, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The control group did not participate in any training program. The physical health of the participants was assessed using a variety of measures, including heart rate, blood pressure, and body mass index. Psychological health was assessed using a variety of measures, including anxiety, depression, and self-esteem. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had significantly better physical and psychological health than the control group at the end of the 12-week training program. The findings of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can have a positive effect on the physical and psychological health of young adults.
